4	Freedom House	"At a minimum, a democracy is a political system in which the people choose their authoritative leaders freely from among competing groups and individuals who are not designated by the government" (Freedom House 2002). According to Freedom House (2010), a country with this electoral aspect—i.e., "political rights"—is labeled as "electoral democracy." However, political rights + civil liberties = "liberal democracy" (Freedom House 2010).	political rights civil liberties	1. Electoral Process 2. Political Pluralism and Participation 3. But electoral democracy is similar to Schumpeterian competitive democracy (Vreeland, 2003, p. 4).
5	Gasirowski (1996) Reich (2002)	"A regime in which (a) meaningful and extensive competition exists among individuals and organized groups for all effective positions of government power, at regular intervals and excluding the use of force; (b) a highly inclusive level of political participation exists in the selection of leaders and policies, such that no major (adult) social group is excluded; and (c) a sufficient level of civil and political liberties exists to ensure the integrity of political competition and participation" (Gasirowski, 1996, p. 471)	(a) competition + effectiveness (b) inclusiveness (c) political rights and civil liberties	 right of political opposition information critical of government and leaders physical intimidation as suppressing political opposition	Contestation + Offices + Effectiveness Participation Contestation (Political Liberties)	Contestation (Electoral Competition) + Effectiveness Participation Contestation (Political and Civil Liberties)	Diamond, Linz, and Lipset's (1989, pp. xvi-xvii) concept which is based on Dahl's (1971) polyarchy

(2001) criticizes the subminimal concept of democracy as proposed by Schumpeter (2010) [1942] and Przeworski et al. (2000). They create the original concept, expanding Dahl's two dimensions by adding civil liberties and effective government.

10	Polity IV (Marshall & Jaggers, 2009)	"Democracy is conceived as three essential, interdependent elements. One is the presence of institutions and procedures through which citizens can express effective preferences about alternative policies and leaders. Second is the existence of institutionalized constraints on the exercise of power by the executive. Third is the guarantee of civil liberties to all citizens in their daily lives and in acts of political participation. Other aspects of plural democracy, such as the rule of law, systems of checks and balances, freedom of the press, and so on are means to, or specific manifestations of, these general principles. We do not include coded data on civil liberties (Marshall & Jaggers, 2009, p. 13)."
